DENT'S CHRONOMETERS,
WATCHES, and CLOCKS have long held pre-eminent rank, as may be seen from Reports of various scientific persons :—

THE ASTRONOMER ROYAL, (Sir G. B. AIRY,) in his Report to the Admiralty (13th of August, 1870) on the forty Chronometers entered for annual competition, says of M. F. DENT's Chronometer—

THIS IS THE FINEST CHRONOMETER WE HAVE EVER HAD ON TRIAL."

N.B.—The LATE ASTRONOMER ROYAL (J. POND, Esq.), reporting in 1839 on the rated public trial, by order of the Lords of the Admiralty, which lasted thirteen days, during which nearly 500 Chronometers were tested; says:

"Your Chronometer, No. 114, is entitled to the First Premium. Actual variation in year 0.54 hundredths of a second. This is superior to any other yet tried."

THE RUSSIAN IMPERIAL ASTRONOMER,
M. STRUVE, of St. Petersburg, reporting upon 81 Chronometers tested by the Russian Chronometrical Expedition, in 1843, says:

"The DENT CHRONOMETERS have held FIRST RANK in a brilliant manner.
They contributed, beyond dispute, THE MOST EFFECTUALLY to the exactitude of the results.

"M. STRUVE."

By Command of the Emperor, the Russian Gold Medal of the Highest Order of Merit was presented to Mr. DENT.

R WILLIAM ARMSTRONG, Inventor of the Armstrong Gun says:—

"9, HYDE PARK STREET, W., 14th November, 1861.

"The Chronometer Watch you made for me in December, 1859, has never been affected by travelling or riding; its variation at the end of a year was only 45 seconds. It has proved in every respect a most satisfactory Watch.

The historical characters, their dresses, so true to the period in which they figured, are in themselves studies for the first modistes, either on this or the other side of the Atlantic. The collection is in itself both recherché and interesting—inasmuch as it gives to the visitor, be he a native or foreigner, a true idea of what can be produced and perpetuated in wax."—Vide PRESS.

This is the only Society which provides free supplies of water in the streets of London, and the relief which it affords, both to human beings and dumb animals, is incalculable.

More than 1,800 horses, besides oxen, sheep, and dogs, frequently drink at a single trough in one day, and half an hour spent at one of these troughs during the heat of the summer would enable the poor creatures to plead their own cause with far more power than any words which the Committee can use.

At the fountains it is estimated that nearly 300,000 people drink daily in the summer, more than 8,000 having been known to drink at one fountain in a single day, many of whom are working men, who would otherwise be compelled to resort to the public-house to quench their thirst, and the Association thus not only relieves one of the most pressing wants of the itinerant poor, but also prevents many of the industrial classes from contracting habits of intemperance.

More than 400 Troughs and Fountains have been erected and are kept in repair and supplied with water by this Society—in some cases the Committee have to pay as much as £30 a year for the water consumed at a single trough—and they earnestly solicit liberal contributions, without which it will be impossible for them to sustain and extend a work the beneficent effects of which are experienced by so many million human beings and animals every year.

Contributions may be paid to the Bankers, Messrs. Ransom, Bouverie, & Co., Pall Mall East, S.W.; and Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, & Co., Lombard Street, E.C.; or at the Office of the Association—to the General Manager and Secretary.

THE BENEVOLENT, OR STRANGERS' FRIEND SOCIETY.

The oldest Institution in existence for Visiting and Relieving the Sick and Distressed Poor at their own habitations in London and its Vicinity.

7, EXETER HALL, STRAND, W.C.
ESTABLISHED A.D. 1785.

PATRON—THE RIGHT HON. LORD EBURY.

Treasurer—J. S. BUDGETT, Esq. | Bankers—Messrs. HOARE, Fleet Street. | Secretary—W. J. CHAMPION, Esq., B.A.

THE PROMINENT FEATURES OF THIS INSTITUTION ARE THE FOLLOWING:—

- 1.—IT IS UNRESTRICTED IN THE EXERCISE OF ITS BENEVOLENCE.—It regards neither creed nor country. Whoever are afflicted and in distress share the truly Protestant attention of its Agents. With pecuniary relief it sends Christian sympathy for sorrows which it cannot assuage. It brings an open Bible and points to Divine consolations. It endeavours to oppose the progress of infidelity and vice, and to promote industry, cleanliness, and social and domestic virtue.
2. IT IS NEITHER SECTARIAN NOR PROSELYTING.—It never says, "You must come to my Church," or "my Chapel." Relief is never in any case either given or withheld on account of the religious tenets of the sufferer.
3. ITS AGENTS AVOID NO LOCALITY.—Cholera, Typhus, Scarlatina, and the many other fearful forms of disease which are found in the damp and gloomy dwellings of the poor, are dreaded by its self-denying Visitors.
4. ITS OPERATIONS ARE NEVER SUSPENDED.—Many of the poor survive the privations of the winter only to fall under the uncertain weather of spring, or decline and die in the heat of the summer. Personal injuries, broken limbs, &c., are most frequent in the busiest season. 2,200 cases were relieved during the six summer months of 1875.
5. THE CHARITY IS BY NO MEANS INDISCRIMINATE.—In no instance is relief afforded until a special inquiry has verified the particular necessities of the case. "The Society for which I plead," says the Rev. Canon Melville, in his sermon on behalf of this Society, "secures you against being imposed upon. So practiced are its agents, so principled are its officers, that you may be certain that whatsoever is given through its instrumentality will reach the most distressed, and at the same time the most deserving."
6. THE ACCOUNTS ARE AUDITED EVERY MONTH the vouchers examined, and compared, and the balance shown and counted.
- LASTLY. THE EXPENSES OF MANAGEMENT ARE SMALL.—Last year the total throughout the 27 districts amounted to only £263, including all charges; nor would they be materially increased though the operations of the Society were doubled or tripled. "When I consider the extent of your organization, and the number of agents you employ," says the Rev. Dr. Spence, "I am astonished at the smallness of your expenses." In many cases, indeed, the Visitors add to the relief allotted by the Society articles of dress, food, furniture, &c., which they either give from their own purses, or obtain from personal friends.

THE STRANGERS' FRIEND SOCIETY HAS RELIEVED ABOVE 500,000 CASES, COMPRISING AT LEAST TWO MILLIONS OF INDIVIDUALS.

SUBSCRIPTIONS, DONATIONS, AND LEGACIES ARE EARNESTLY SOLICITED, And will be thankfully received by Messrs. HOARE, Bankers, Fleet Street; or by the Secretary, 7, Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C.

The Society thankfully receives left-off clothing, &c., which often proves exceedingly serviceable to families newly recovered from sickness. Such donations may be directed to the Secretary, at the Office of the Society, 7, Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C.

REDUCED PREMIUMS.—Assurances may be effected upon payment of four-fifths of the rates chargeable according to the Society's Table, subject to CERTAIN CONDITIONS fully set forth and explained in the Prospectus.

CLAIMS.—The total amount of Claims paid upon death from the commencement of the Society to 1st June, 1875, was £1,265,881.

BONUS.—The whole available Bonus is the sole property of Life Assurers; no part whatever is taken from it to be shared amongst proprietors. At the end of every fifth year, profits are equitably apportioned amongst existing Life Assurances. By means of Bonus, 585 of the earlier Life Assurances have been relieved altogether from the payment of Annual Premiums, and additions in almost every case have been made to the sum assured. £280,000 was divided amongst Life Assurances at the last declaration of profits. The next Bonus will be due 1st June, 1876, and Insurances made previously to such date will share therein.

Assurers have the privilege, at the time of making an Assurance, of selecting the mode in which the Bonus, whenever due, shall be applied, viz., in an immediate Cash payment, or to the reduction of the Annual Premium, or to the increase of the Capital sum assured.

Assurances may be effected on LIVES, SURVIVORS, &c., &c., as stated in the Society's Prospectus, to any amount not exceeding £7,500.

This Society is strictly confined to the Clergy of the Church of England and of the Episcopal Church of Scotland, their Wives and Families, and the near relations of themselves and Wives.

Prospectuses, Bonus Accounts, Forms of Proposal, &c., may be had at the Office, on personal application, or by letter.

Policies are indisputable, except on the ground of fraud.

Lapsed Policies are revived within the period of three months upon payment of the overdue premium and a small fine, without evidence of health.

Whole World Licenses will be granted in most cases, without payment of extra Premium.

Nine-tenths of the Profits are divided among the Assured every five years.

At an Extraordinary General Meeting, held on June 9th, 1875, the sum of £844,379 was set aside as the value of the Society's liabilities under its Assurance and Annuity Contracts, and £173,180 was ordered to be divided as Bonus, leaving a balance of undivided profit of £20,033.

Nine-tenths of the sum divided was allotted among holders of Policies for £2,500,000.

THE ACCUMULATED FUND of this Society (exceeding £600,000) is of unusual magnitude in proportion to its liabilities.

ALL THE PROFITS belong to the Assured, and are applied to the gradual reduction and ultimate extinction of their premiums, a result which may be expected to occur, in the average of cases, in about twenty years from the date of the Policy.

FUNDS for the EDUCATION of CHILDREN and for their ESTABLISHMENT IN LIFE may be provided on unusually favourable terms, on a new system lately introduced by this Society, based upon tables of mortality specially constructed for the purpose.

Persons residing in the country can effect Assurances without personal attendance in London.

Prospectuses and further information forwarded post free on application.

COOPER'S SYRUP OF CAMPHOR

A pleasant, safe, and effectual remedy for COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, SORE THROATS, and all affections of the Bronchial Tubes.

The singular reputation of this syrup, as much in the prevention as in the cure of the above complaints, experience has fully confirmed; and considering the variety of cases in which it has been tried, perhaps no other medicine has ever met with such general success and approbation. It has deservedly obtained distinguished patronage, and many of the nobility, clergy, &c., are using it under the recommendation of some of the most eminent of the faculty, who are daily admitting and testifying to its efficacy. Its properties are concentrated in an agreeable form, and its action as a sudorific and expectorant is materially enhanced by the addition of balsamic demulcents, which render this syrup a universal acquisition in the disorders mentioned, and particularly adapted for ladies and children, with whom paregoric and other opiates are so frequently objectionable.

"Kensington Palace.
"Will Messrs. Cooper and Co. be kind enough to send to Mrs. Croker, Kensington Palace, four bottles of Syrup of Camphor."

"Lady Hester Lecke will thank Messrs. Cooper and Co. to send her two 2s. 9d. bottles and one 1s. 1½d. bottle of the Syrup of Camphor to the address given above, by London and North-Western Railway."

From the late Sir John Hesketh Lethbridge, Bart., Sandhill Park, near Taunton.
"Sir John Hesketh Lethbridge, Bart., requests Messrs. Cooper and Co. to send him a large bottle of their Syrup of Camphor, which immediately relieves his cough, with another packet of the Mustard Tissue Paper.
"To Messrs. Cooper and Co., Analytical Chemists, South Kensington."

PRÉFACE.

"DEBRETT" has been known to, and patronized by, at least five generations of the "upper ten thousand." For one hundred and seventy years its reputation as a standard book of reference has been maintained, and, if this edition prove equal to its predecessors, the work will have gained another step in the ladder of Fame.

For a publication to have preserved a high reputation for such a remarkably long period is entirely exceptional, and we believe that "DEBRETT" of the present day is as much respected by those members of the aristocracy who are in their virility as by those who, now in their senility, have for six or seven decades patronized the work.

Prefatory words to a new edition of such a venerable book may appear to be supererogative, but we obey the behests of custom while being fully convinced that nullum est jam dictum quod non dictum sit prius. Our remarks are, however, addressed to adolescents, with the hope that those who are budding into adult life may appreciate "DEBRETT" as much as did their sires and grandsires.

The specialties of "DEBRETT" are for the most part well known in society, but, being perfectly distinct from those of kindred books, the younger branches of the community may be glad to know that the work—

- (i) furnishes more information anent living members of the titled classes and their immediate connections than all other kindred books combined;
- (ii) is the only illustrated volume that gives (a) the addresses of the widows of peers, baronets, and knights, (b) the services, residences, clubs, &c., of the younger children of peers and baronets, (c) the inferior titles of peers arranged in alphabetical order, (d) the engraved tinctures of the armorial bearings of peers and baronets, and (e) full biographical sketches of knights;
- (iii) is the cheapest illustrated work of the kind extant.

The alterations necessitated by promotions and other causes among the collateral branches of peers and baronets, and among knights, were in 1875 much beyond the average, while those referring to the heads of families were unusually few.

For some years past the numbers both of marriages and births among the titled classes and their children had been gradually waning; in 1875, however, a material change occurred, and the year is remarkable for the great number of fashionable marriages that were solemnized, and the many children that were born to those whose names appear herein, or to their immediate connections.

The information furnished throughout the volume is entirely devoted to dry facts, a circumstance at which some octogenarians express surprise when they compare such with the fulsome adulation, or covert sneers, with which the biographies of "DEBRETT" were interlarded in their early days. The appreciated simplicity of the present style is, however, a practical exemplification of the utilitarian character of the age.

Having referred to variations of editorial work, it may not be outré to record a few instances of the difficulties that arise in compiling a book of this character. For instance, one branch of a family feels indignant because certain political or other successes of another branch are not referred to, while the real "Simon Pures" request that every reference to such subjects may be expunged! The head of another family considers he is not properly described unless certain services are recorded—services which his relatives deem too trivial for insertion! Then waywardness has to be contended with, a weakness with which many are afflicted. Thus gentlemen who a few years ago were proud to be described in a certain manner object after promotion to have their early successes recorded. Honores mutant mores!

To ensure reliable data neither expense nor trouble has been spared, and as 18-20ths of the information furnished has been corrected by the noblemen and peeresses, and ladies and gentlemen, referred to in the work, the contents may be accepted as reliable. In respect to baronets, however, some instances occur in which comparatively speculative particulars are published, inasmuch as no information can be procured respecting the gentlemen referred to. But these refer to creations that are to all intents and purposes temporarily obsolete, as each holder thereof, having inherited only a title, is living in obscurity, and to whom we cannot apply the motto, Avito viret honore. Such is the mutability of human affairs!

The unwarrantable assumption of baronetages by persons who have no claim thereto annually increases, and it appears to us to be a blot upon the escutcheon of English jurisprudence that any adventurer may, with the greatest impunity, dub himself with the much-coveted honour of "baronet."

The obituary of 1875 includes the names of 20 peers, 15 peeresses, 26 baronets, and 34 knights. The number of each of the three first-mentioned classes was below the average, while the mortality among knights, though in excess of 1874, was not disproportionately heavy. In the same year four peerages (Aldbrough, Charleville, Duffus, and Fitzwalter) and six baronetages (Dunbar, Culling-Eardley, Lyell, Macdonnell, Musgrave, and Prideaux) became extinct; one heir-apparent to a peerage (Viscount Grey de Wilton) was created a peer during the lifetime of his father; two Scotch earls (Dalhousie and Home) were promoted to English peerages,* and the dormant Scotch barony of Belhaven and Stenton was revived; one gentleman (Barttelott) was created a baronet, 9 new members (Baggallay, Bentinck, Couch, Keating, Lorne, Murray, Ormsby, Shrewsbury, and Thynne) were sworn Privy Councillors, and 32 gentlemen (Begbie, Brown, Buckle, Cadogan, Cole, Collinson, Cuppage, Daly, Du Cane, Ellis, Field, Garth, Giffard, Gregory, Holdich, Haly, Huddleston, Lake, Lindley, Loring, Macleay, Mitchell, Richardson, Robinson, Sladen, Sotheby, Souter, Tarville, Vogel, Wade, Walton, and Wilson) received the honour of knighthood.

For the courteous aid rendered to me by many noblemen and others, I offer my cordial thanks, and soliciting early information respecting future promotions, births, marriages, deaths, &c.,

I have the honour to subscribe myself

THE EDITOR.

e By the Irish Church Act of 1869.

f But if any Peer be the Principal Secretary of State, he shall be placed above all other Peers of his degree, not having any of the great offices before mentioned. By the 23rd Article of the Union of Scotland, which was confirmed by statute 5th Anne, cap. 1, all Peers of Scotland shall be Peers of Great Britain, and have rank next after the Peers of the like degree in England at the time of the Union, which commenced the 1st of May, 1707, and before all Peers of Great Britain of the same degree created after the Union. By the Act for the Union of Ireland, 39 and 40 Geo. III. cap. 67, it is enacted, "The Lords of Parliament on the part of Ireland shall have the same privileges as the Lords on the part of Great Britain; and all the Lords Spiritual of Ireland shall have rank next after the Lords Spiritual of the same rank in Great Britain, and shall enjoy the same privileges (except those depending upon sitting in the House of Lords); and the Temporal Peers of Ireland shall have rank next after the Peers of the like rank in Great Britain at the time of the Union; and all Peerages of Ireland and of the United Kingdom created after the Union, shall have rank according to creation; and all Peerages of Great Britain and Ireland shall in all other respects be considered as Peerages of the United Kingdom: and the peers of Ireland shall enjoy the same privileges, except those depending upon sitting in the House of Lords." The priority of signing any treaty or public instrument by public Ministers, is taken by rank of place, and not by title.

Tables of Precedency usually subdivide the degree of Esquire to a considerable extent; comprehending Flag and Field Officers, Eldest Sons of the younger sons of Peers, Baronets' Eldest Sons, Eldest Sons of Knights of the Garter, Eldest Sons of Bannerets, of Knights of the Bath, and of Knights Bachelors, and the Younger Sons of the younger sons of Peers, of Baronets, of Knights of the Bath, of Knights Bachelors, &c.

Many printed tables extend the order of precedence to Divines, Members of the Legal Profession, Officers of the Army and Navy, Citizens and Burgesses; in point of fact, however, such persons have no peculiar precedence assigned to them, either by statute or by any fixed principle. In certain public ceremonials of State, such as coronations, royal funerals, and those of distinguished public individuals, wherein the Knight Marshal, Judge of the Admiralty, Law Officers of the Crown, and others, have formed part of those proceedings, the following precedence appears for many years to have been observed, viz. :—

Baronets.                      Knights of the Bath.

Knight Marshal. Judge of the Admiralty. Prime Serjeant. Gentlemen of the Privy Chamber.

Esquires of the King's Body.

Attorney-General. Solicitor-General. Serjeants-at-Law. Masters in Chancery.

Knights Bachelors.

Divines.              Physicians.              Esquires.

Gentlemen.

It should be remarked that Esquires of the King's body do not appear in any recent ceremonials; and that by virtue of a Royal Warrant bearing date 14 Dec. 1813, His Majesty King George III. in consideration of the important and weighty affairs in which his Attorney and Solicitor-General were constantly engaged on behalf of the Crown, was pleased to declare that henceforth they should have pre-audience in all Courts of Law before the Ancient Serjeant-at-Law, as well as all other Serjeants-at-Law; and consequently, at the funeral of Queen Charlotte, in 1818, and at the Coronation of King George IV., 1821, those high officers had precedence of Gentlemen of the Privy Chamber, over whom the King's Prime Serjeant had precedence, and in subsequent public ceremonials they have been so placed.

TITLES, ORDERS, AND DEGREES OF PRECEDENCE AND DIGNITY.

THE origin of Heraldry, and of the use of family arms and mottoes, which form a prominent feature in the English system of "honours," has been ascribed with much appearance of truth to the necessity of leaders in battle bearing some device or mark by which their followers could constantly recognise them. These are beyond doubt of very ancient origin—as ancient, probably, or nearly so, as the existence of war itself, though it was not until towards the later period of the middle ages that Heraldry was moulded into a science—a designation it has substantially deserved. It was an important portion of the learning of times of ignorance, and still constitutes an elegant and interesting branch of investigation. The study of Heraldry, in all its innumerable quaint meanings and allusions, cannot be pursued long without opening up new and enlightened views upon important subjects and throwing light upon "dark places" in the manners of bygone times. The mere process of ascertaining the significance of offices, titles, emblems, ceremonials, &c., is a beneficial intellectual exercise, leading the mind back through many of the most stirring passages in history. But as the space assigned to this Essay does not permit us to enter into these details, we turn at once to our proper subject, namely, the TITLES, STATES, and DEGREES OF PRECEDENCE and DIGNITY, as existing in this country.

I.

We are told by a distinguished writer on precedence, that "The Orders of State, and division of degrees and honours in the British government, consist of a king or monarch, noblemen or gentry, citizens freeborn, who are designated yeomen, and artizans or handicraftsmen."

First in honour and dignity, as in power—indeed, the seat and fountain of all three—is

THE ROYAL CROWN.

THE HERALDIC CROWN.

who, in addition to the well-known powers habitually exercised by the Crown, possesses, according to Camden, "many rights and privileges peculiar to majesty, termed by the learned lawyers sacra sacrorum, that is, sacred and individual, or inseparable, because they cannot be severed; and the ordinary royal prerogatives, termed the flowers of his crown, in which respect they affirm that the regal material crown is adorned with flowers. Some of these are held by positive or written law others which, by right of custom, by a silent consent of all men without law, prescription of time has allowed, the King justly enjoys."

Amongst the more clearly defined prerogatives of the British monarch are those of convoking, adjourning, removing, and dissolving Parliament, refusing assent to bills, without which assent they cannot become law, and increasing the numbers of the members of either House, either by creating new peers or enabling towns to send members. As respects the Commons, however, this power has long been obsolete. The Sovereign declares war at pleasure; chooses and appoints all commanders and officers by land and sea; all judges, magistrates, counsellors, and officers of state, Archbishops, Bishops, and high ecclesiastical dignitaries; bestows all public honours, pardons criminals, and exercises many other powers, usually by the advice of the Cabinet Ministers, who, however, alone are responsible, the theory of English law being that the Sovereign can commit no wrong. Another theory of our law is that the King (or Queen) never dies—substantially, that the throne is never vacant, the succession of the heir being instantaneous. Hence, observes a constitutional writer, "the ceremony of a coronation is merely a solemn recognition and confirmation of the royal descent, and consequent right of accession, and is not necessary for the security of the title to the crown. It is, however, highly essential, inasmuch as it tends to a formal establishment of those rights which the people claim from the monarch in return for the duty and allegiance they are bound to observe towards the new Sovereign."

The coronation ceremonial is more splendid, emblematic, and elaborate in England than in any other country. Instance the anointing with oil, which has been used upwards of one thousand years; the formal crowning, the several religious ceremonies, beside the insignia of royalty, amongst which are, "a ring, to signify his faithfulness; a bracelet for good works; a sword, for vengeance; purple robes, to attract reverence; and a diadem, to blazen his glory." Some of these forms would seem to be of Judaical origin.

The derivation of our word king, is, according to Chamberlayne, from the Saxon word Konig, or Cyning, which comes from Can, intimating power, or Ken, knowledge, wherewith every sovereign should be invested. Some of the titles of our Saxon kings were very quaint and pompous. These were discontinued by the Normans, and it was not until Henry IV. adopted the title of "Grace," that prefixes came into use. These prefixes were successively changed (at the pleasure of the sovereigns themselves) into "Excellent Grace," "High and Mighty Prince," and "Highness," until Henry VIII. adopted those of "Majesty" and "Dread Sovereign," which latter it will be admitted, was in his case completely appropriate. The word "Sire," usually heading letters addressed to a male sovereign, is derived from the Greek, and merely signifies Lord.

II.

THE HEIR-APPARENT.

The Heir-Apparent to the Crown is next below the Sovereign in all honour and dignity—not as participating or comparing with the latter, who stands alone and supreme, but as enjoying the largest share of the honour which flows from the Crown.

Of course no person can hold this position save the eldest son of the Sovereign, or, if the former be dead, his eldest son, and so on—supposing the improbable case of the death and succession of several eldest sons during the life of the Sovereign. This constant preference of the direct line to the closest collateral branch is one of the arrangements which distinguish the European from some of the Asiatic orders of succession, and tends greatly to preclude confusion and discord.

When there is no living son, or living male descendant thereof, the nearest heir is heir-presumptive, because, though presumably the Sovereign's successor, the latter may yet have a son. On the death of an eldest son without male issue, his next brother takes his place.

Since the institution of the title by Edward I., the heir-apparent has been invariably created Prince of Wales. But it is a mistake to suppose that he is born with that title. There is no succession of Princes of Wales; the title becomes merged in the Crown until renewed by the Sovereign's pleasure. Thus, had George IV. died whilst Prince of Wales, his next brother, though heir-apparent would not have been Prince of Wales. The placarded announcement of "Birth of a Prince of Wales," which gladdened the hearts of Englishmen on the 9th November, 1841, was founded on a popular fallacy; for an eccentric sovereign may so determine that there shall be no Prince of Wales, save in so far as provision is made by the act of Edward III., who conferred the title on his son Edward (the renowned Black Prince), "to be held of him and his heirs, Kings of England."

But though not born Prince of Wales, the heir-apparent is born Duke of Cornwall—a title created by Edward III. in favour of the Black Prince, since which time, the chroniclers tell us, "the King's first-born son, from the hour of his birth, is reputed Duke of Cornwall." He also becomes immediately entitled to the revenues of his duchy, which are held at usufruct and accumulation for his benefit. This royal inheritance, by-the-by, is at present very lucrative. Less than forty years since the revenues of the property, which had been grossly neglected and mismanaged, were estimated at little more than £14,000 per annum, but under the wise superintendence of the lamented Prince Consort, a system of energy, and carefulness, and thrift was introduced, through which it is understood they have risen to something like £50,000 per annum—the income now enjoyed in virtue of his duchy rights by our present illustrious and beloved Prince of Wales. The very large sum of ready money of which His Royal Highness became possessed upon attaining the age of twenty-one, arose from the accumulation and improvement of the annual revenues under the care of his illustrious father; and out of this fund the purchase of the Sandringham estate was effected.

As to the rank and privileges of this illustrious personage, we learn from the British Compendium, Carter, Sir W. Segar, and other authorities, that "next to his father, should his father be a king, he is chief of the realm, and by course of the civil law is to sit at his right hand in all solemn assemblies of state and honour; but he has no kingly prerogatives, by the laws of Britain, in the life of his father, but acknowledges a reverence, not only as to a father, but also as to his sovereign." It is, perhaps, straining a point to affirm with Carter that the motto "Ich Dien" (I serve) adopted by the Black Prince, after slaying John King of Bohemia at the battle of Cressy, is continued by the heir-apparent solely in token of his filial obedience. An old statute of Edward III. enacts "that to compass or imagine the death of the King's eldest son and heir is crimen læsæ majestatis" (high treason).

It is a fact little noticed that on the union of the Crowns of England and Scotland, King James's son (Prince Henry) was created "Prince of Great Britain and Ireland," and that this nominally higher title survives in the person of our Prince of Wales; but the older and more venerable honour has long since caused the other to fall into disuse.

To those who take pleasure in stately ceremonials and heraldic devices, it will be interesting to learn that the theoretical forms laid down for the ceremony of creating a Prince of Wales are thus:—"He is presented before the King in his surcoat, cloak and mantle of crimson velvet, and girt with a belt of the same, when the King putteth a cap of crimson velvet, indented and turned up with ermine, and a coronet, on his head, as a token of principality; and the King also putteth into his hand a verge of gold, the emblem of government, and a ring of gold on his middle finger, to intimate that he must be a husband to his country and a father to his children. To him are likewise given and granted letters patent, to hold the same principality, to him and his heirs, Kings of England, by which words the separation of this principality is for ever prohibited. The coronet placed on his head is of gold, and consists of crosses patée and fleurs-de-lys, with the addition of one arch, and in the midst a ball and a cross, as hath the royal diadem, which was solemnly ordered to be used by a grant dated February 9, 1660-61, 11th Charles II., xxx. His mantle which he wears at the coronation is doubled below the elbow with ermine, spotted diamond-wise; but the robe which he wears in Parliament is adorned with fars or guards of ermine, set at an equal distance one from the other, with a gold lace above each bar."

It is unnecessary to repeat to the readers of this work the somewhat apocryphal story with which they made acquaintance in their school-books, of the ruse said to have been practised by Edward I. upon the Welsh barons, when creating his son Prince of Wales, and thus founding this illustrious title; but in reference to the actuality of the titles of heir-apparent and Prince of Wales, it may be expedient to remark that, though theoretically distinct, they are practically identical.

The rank and position of the other members of the Royal Family, being sufficiently defined in the general Tables of Precedence, inserted elsewhere, need not be further referred to here. The clauses of the Royal Marriage Act prohibiting the marriage of personages connected with the Blood Royal without the sanction of the sovereign, but considerably modified by a conditional proviso, or door of grace, do not enter into the specific subject of this notice.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY, THE LORD HIGH CHANCELLOR, THE ARCHBISHOPS OF YORK, ARMAGH, AND DUBLIN.*

THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY is the first peer of England next to the Royal Family, preceding not only all Dukes, but all the great officers of the Crown. The Bishop of London is his Provincial Dean, the Bishop of Lincoln his Chancellor, and the Bishop of Rochester his Chaplain. "It belongs to him to crown the King;"

* The names of these eminent personages are grouped together, as they constitute a kind of distinctive belt of separation between the Royal Family and the general nobility.

and we are informed by a curious old book upon special privileges, "that where-soever the Court shall happen to be, the king and queen are speciales domestici parochiani Arch. Cant. (parishioners of the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury). The power of the Archbishops of Canterbury was formerly enormous, not only in the ecclesiastical but the secular point of view. The Archbishop was also very frequently Lord Chancellor, and the instances are not few in which the influence of the archiepiscopal see has been formidable to the throne itself. Since the Reformation, this secular influence, which had been long declining, may be said to have altogether ceased. The Archbishop of Canterbury, like his brother of York, is entitled "Your Grace." The former styles himself, "By Divine Providence," but the Archbishop of York and the other bishops, "By Divine Permission."* The arms of the Archbishop of Canterbury are—Azure, a pastoral staff in pale, argent, ensigned with a cross patée, or, surmounted by a pall of the second, edged and fringed as the third, charged with four crosses fitchée, sable, impaling, or, a cross, gules, between four Moors' heads, full-faced, proper, for Archbishop Juxon (in commemoration of this prelate's faithful attendance upon King Charles I. in his last hours).

THE LORD HIGH CHANCELLOR.—This exalted office was in former times filled by a prelate, but for more than three centuries this custom has wholly ceased. The Lord Chancellor alone authorises all patents, writs, and grants, by affixing the Great Seal thereto. He collates to the ecclesiastical benefices in the gift of the Crown, is Keeper of the Great Seal, and "judges, according to equity, conscience, and reason, when he finds the law of the land (the common law) so defective that the subject would be injured thereby." Appeals lie to him from all the other courts, and from his decisions there is no appeal except to the House of Lords. For many years the Lord Chancellor has been invariably created a peer concomitantly with his appointment, whereas in more ancient times, when not held by an ecclesiastic, the office was always filled by a commoner, as in the illustrious instance of Sir Thomas More. At present the Lord High Chancellor is the most indispensable

* The See of Canterbury was founded by St. Augustine, and has held pre-eminent rank in the English Church for 1,200 years. But it appears that in the Anglo-Saxon or British times the three British archbishops were those of London, York, and Caerlon-upon-Usk. These ancient ecclesiastical arrangements were, of course, swept away by the predominant and pagan Saxons.

personage in the House of Peers, where he discharges functions analogous (mutatis mutandis) with those exercised by the Speaker of the House of Commons.

THE ARCHBISHOP OF YORK.—As already intimated, the See of York is more ancient than that of Canterbury. Whilst the holder of the latter is "Primate of all England," the Archbishop of York is simply "Primate of England"—a distinction, let us observe, with a difference. He has the privilege of crowning the Consort, and he is her perpetual chaplain. Within his own province he possesses powers nearly equivalent to those exercised by the Archbishop of Canterbury within his. The Archbishop of York precedes all secular peers except the Lord Chancellor.

THE NOBILITY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

Heraldic authorities divide the nobility of this kingdom into two orders—the greater and the less,—the former consisting of all the degrees from a baron upwards and inclusive; the latter of the baronets, knights, esquires, and gentlemen. Practically, however, the only recognised noblemen amongst us are the peers spiritual and temporal, and those who by courtesy bear titles in virtue of their immediate connexion with noble houses. In illustration of the meaning of courtesy-titles, reference may be made to the terms in which a Royal Commission is issued. The present Earl Russell is one of the younger sons of a late Duke of Bedford, and before his elevation to the peerage was designated by courtesy Lord John Russell, whereas in strict observance he would have been simply "John Russell, Esq.," but for the prefix of "right honourable," derived from his political offices. In Parliament and society he was invariably spoken of as "Lord John Russell," and addressed as "My Lord," but in Royal proclamations and other documents strictly observant of formula, his designation was "The Right Honourable John Russell, commonly called Lord John Russell."

Practically, the degrees of the nobility in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland are five—viz., Dukes, Marquesses, Earls, Viscounts, and Barons, to which may be added a sixth—viz., Archbishops and Bishops, most of whom, as spiritual lords, are entitled to a seat in the House of Peers, and possess for their lives and the faculties and privileges of the peerage. But the wives of archbishops and bishops derive neither title nor precedence from the dignities of their husbands. The wife of an archbishop is simply Mrs. —, and takes place merely as the wife of a simple gentleman.

DUKE.—This title is the highest of our designations of nobility. We have no "princes" outside the blood-royal. Indeed, so pre-eminent in honour and dignity is the ducal title, that our royal princes, on attaining their majority, or succeeding to their paternal rights, become dukes, as if the latter were the superior distinction. Thus, Prince George of Cambridge, on the death of his father, became Duke of Cambridge.

DUKE.

Much learned ingenuity has been expended in the endeavour to trace the origin of a title which, though of comparatively modern introduction into this country, has, in one meaning and another, been in existence since the days of ancient Rome—or, we might add, since the origin of the Latin tongue itself. It would seem obvious enough that the derivation from the Latin dux (a leader) indicates a leading man or chieftain, whether in war, or as the ruler and manager of a district, or in some position of power and trust. It is, in fact, not necessarily a subordinate title in any degree. The Dukes of Savoy, the Dukes of Tuscany, "cum multis aliis," were sovereign and independent princes, and the German Confederation to this day furnishes cases in point. It is not necessary to go back to the old days of the Dukes of Normandy, Burgundy, Bretagne, &c., to understand that, however antiquarians may refine upon the matter, the essential meaning of the word "duke" is that of a man of the highest rank and mark; and this is the actual position of these dignified personages in this country. There is no doubt, however, that for many centuries the title was rather one of charge and office than of dignity, the latter characteristic being appended as society became consolidated, and titular dignities systematised, when the anarchy following the fall of the Roman Empire began to subside into order. Although the first formal creation of a duke in England was by Edward III., we hear of dukes in the Saxon times. Thus, old Joseph Holland reminds us that "Hollingshed, in his 'Chronicle,' fol. 235, recordeth that King Edgar's second wife was called Alfreda, the daughter of Orgar, Duke of Devon, by whom hee had yssue Egelthred, that was afterwards King of this lande, and is beried in Powlis." This, however, may have been only an official title, for the word frequently appears in the Saxon chronicles in a sense inferior to that of earl, bishop, and even abbot. Otho the Great, about the year 970, is supposed to have been the first to constitute the title of duke regularly as one of honour and nobility; and it became hereditary in France and other parts of the Continent long before it was, so to speak, naturalised in England. It has been surmised that one cause of its not being introduced earlier in England was the reluctance of the Norman kings—their own Dukes of Normandy—to grant subjects a title resembling their own. The following passage from a quaint old writer gives an authentic account of the creation of the first English duke:—

"The first Duke that I finde sence the Conquest, was made by Kinge Eduard III. xj. regni sui; where he made of the earldome of Cornwayle a dutchye, and created the Black Prince, his eldest sonne, Prince of Wales, Duke of Cornwayle, and Earl of Chester, and I have a dede made by the said Black Prince, wherein his stile is, Edward Disne Fitz de Roy D'Engleter and de France, Prince de Aquitonie et de Cales, Duc de Cornwall, Count de Chester, and Seignor de Biscane." At the same time, we learn, "King Edward created in Parliament his two sons, Lionel Duke of Clarence, and John Duke of Lancaster, by the girding of a sword, and setting upon their heads a furred chapeau or cap, with a circlet or coronet of gold and pearls, and a charter delivered to each of them. From which time there have been many hereditary Dukes amongst us, created one after another, with the following or similar words:—'We give and grant the name, title, state, style, place, seat, pre-eminence honour, authority, and dignity of a Duke, and by the cincture of a sword, and imposition of a cap and coronet of gold upon his head, as also by delivering unto him a verge of gold, we do really invest," &c. It is needless to say that the many ceremonies formerly attending the creation of dukes and other peers are no longer observed.

Between the Wars of the Roses and the decapitations under the Tudor princes, the ducal order was extinct or in abeyance during Elizabeth's reign, and was revived by James I. in the person of his favourite Villiers.

The mantle or surcoat, which a duke wears at the coronation of king or queen, is of crimson velvet lined with white taffeta, and the mantle is doubled from the neck to the elbow with ermine, having four rows of spots on each shoulder. His parliamentary robes are of fine scarlet cloth, lined with taffeta, and doubled with four guards of ermine at equal distances, with gold lace above each guard, and tied up to the left shoulder by a white riband; his cap is of crimson velvet, lined with ermine, having a gold tassel on the top; his coronet is a circle of gold enriched with precious stones and pearls, and set round with eight strawberry leaves. He is styled His Grace, and by the Sovereign in public instruments, Our right trusty and right entirely beloved cousin, with the addition of and counsellor when a member of the Privy Council.

MARQUESS is another comparatively new dignity in England, which, by the potential will of the Sovereign, was raised to precedency over the ancient style and dignity of the earls. The title appears to be of German origin, and, as the name implies, is derived from the government of marches, or frontier provinces; it was called by the Saxons, Markin Reeve; and by the Germans, Markgräve. It has the next place of honour to that of a duke, and was introduced many years subsequent to the establishment of that dignity in England. The first on whom that honour was conferred was the great favourite of King Richard II., Robert de Vere, Earl of Oxford, who was created Marquess of Dublin, and placed in

MARQUESS.

Parliament between the dukes and earls. The marquesses were created by the King by "cincture of the sword, and imposition of the cap of honour and dignitie, with the coronet, as also by the delivery of a charter or writing." The creations, however, were not very numerous, and it would appear that the new honour was not greatly coveted by the old nobility; for in the Parliamentary Rolls it is recorded that "John de Beaufort, from being Earl of Somerset, was, by Richard II., created Marquess of Dorset, and afterwards, by Henry VI., deprived of that title, the time when the Commons of England made humble suit in Parliament to the King, that he would restore him to his title of marquess, which he had lost. He opposed himself against that petition, and openly said that it was a new dignitie, and altogether unknown to his ancestors, and that therefore he neither craved it nor in any wise would he accept of it." The creation to this dignity was with nearly the same ceremony as that of a duke; but it now takes place by patent under the Great Seal, without any additional ceremony. The coronation robes are of crimson velvet lined with taffeta, and have four guards of ermine on the right side, and three on the left, set at equal distances, with gold lace above each guard, and tied up to the left shoulder by a white riband; the cap is of crimson velvet lined with ermine, having a gold tassel at top; the coronet is of gold, and has pearls and golden strawberry leaves mixed alternately, round, of nearly equal height. The general style of a marquess is Most Honourable; and he is styled by the King or Queen, Our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin, and counsellor when of the Privy Council.

EARL.—It has been customary to identify this ancient English dignity with the Latin Comes “Companion” (French, Comte; Anglicè, Count), one of the duties or privileges of possessors of the title being to accompany the King, and to give counsel, advice, and aid on important occasions. We are told that “Constantine the Great, in order to secure the attachment of his followers, created a number of these Comites, as Comes Domesticorum (Master of the Household), Comes Stabuli (Master of the Horse); also such dignities as Comes Orientis, Comes Africæ (Lieutenant of the East, of Africa, &c.) Thence ever since the name of Comes imparted dignity, and the authority or government was at first temporary, but afterwards enjoyed for life. Moreover, in process of time, when the Roman empire was divided into many kingdoms, this title was nevertheless retained, and our English Saxons called those in Latin Comites and Consules, whom, in their own language, they called Ealdormen, the same which the Danes in their tongue called Eorlas, that is, honourable, as Ethelward writes, by which name, somewhat softened, they are called by us, at this day, Earls.” In the Saxon times the title was one of the highest dignity and eminence. Earl Godwin occupied a rank much higher than that of any noble of the present day. It was even applied to sovereign princes. Thus William the Conqueror, sovereign of Normandy, is frequently called Earl of Normandy, and William of Malmesbury never mentions him otherwise. The Norman kings adopted the Saxon title, and the first earls created were dignitaries of enormous power, holding not only proprietary, but virtually sovereign sway over large districts of country. Hugh Lupus, Earl of Chester, was a real potentate within his territory, though exercising his authority in the name of the king; and so with others. But the number of earls increased rapidly, whilst the possibility of furnishing them with land and revenue diminished in proportionate ratio, so that various devices were resorted to for the purpose of furnishing the new creations with the means of support.* The dignity of the distinction was thus depreciated. Earls were created with the name of some place appended to the title, and the third penny of the shire was assigned unto them, for example, the Empress Maud, daughter and heir to King Henry I., created an earl in the following words:—“I, Maud, daughter of King Henry, and ladee of the Englishmen, doe give and grant unto Geffrey de Margravl for his service, and to his heirs after him, by right of inheritance, to be Earle of Essex, and to have the third pennie out of the Sheriff's Court, issuing out of all pleas, as an Earle should have thorow his countrie in all things.” And Henry II.:—“Know yee, that we have made Hugh Begod, Earle of Norfolk, to wit, of the third pennie, of Norwic and Norfolk, as fully as any Earle of England holdeth his countie.”

* Immediately after the Conquest, earls began to be feudal, hereditary, and parliamentary—that is, by fee or tenure, by service, by inheritance, and by lands. In the Domesday Book they were named earls without any addition—Earl Hugh, Earl Roger &c.

Of course this source of provision had a limit, and at a subsequent period the monarch was accustomed to assign pensions, not only to earls, but to other persons whom he ennobled, in the following proportions:—Viscounts, a fee of 20 marks; Earls, of £20; Marquesses, a fee of 40 marks, and Dukes of £40, out of some particular part of the royal revenue. A creation fee to barons was not settled; but Charles I., when he created Mountjoy Blount Lord Mountjoy, of Thurodston, Derbyshire, assigned to him and his issue male a creation fee of 20 marks per annum.

The earl's coronation robe is the same as a duke's or marquess's, except that he has only three guards of ermine and gold lace; his cap is the same as theirs. It is uncertain when the coronets of dukes, marquesses, and earls were settled. Sir Robert Cecil, Earl of Salisbury, Viscount Cranbourne, was the first of that degree who wore a coronet. An earl's coronet is a circle of gold bordered with ermine, heightened with eight pyramidal points, or rays, placed alternately with as many strawberry leaves; a large pearl is placed on the top of each ray. His style is Right Honourable, and he is addressed by the king or queen as Our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin, and counsellor when of the Privy Council.

VISCOUNT (Viscomes) was anciently the name of him who held the chief office under an earl. The latter being often at Court, the viscount was his deputy to look after the affairs of the country. In the reign of Henry VI., 1439, the title became a degree of honour, and was made hereditary. The first viscount in England, created by patent, was John, Lord Beaumont, who was by the above monarch created Viscount Beaumont, and he gave him precedence above all barons. His coronation robes are the same as an earl's, with the exception that he has only two rows of plain white fur on his parliamentary robe; his cap is the same, and the golden circle of his coronet is surmounted by fourteen pearls.

VISCOUNT.

His style is Right Honourable, and he is addressed by the King or Queen as Our right trusty and well-beloved cousin.

BISHOP.—In our article upon Archbishops we have indicated much of the matter bearing upon ecclesiastical dignities generally, but it should be added that the archbishops and bishops of England are, with a few exceptions, also barons of the kingdom and of Parliament.* To these, says Camden, “by right and custom it appertained to be, with the rest of the peers, personally present at all Parliament whatsoever, there to consult, to handle, to ordain, decree, and determine in regard of the baronies which they held of the king.” The bishops take precedence of the temporal barons, and it would seem that at one time their degree of precedence went even higher, for “at the coronation of Charles II. it was expressly ordered,

* On the creation of the bishopric of Manchester, it being undesirable to increase the number of spiritual peers in Parliament, it was ordained that the new bishop should have no seat until the occurrence of a vacancy, and that thenceforth each newly-appointed bishop should remain out of Parliament until death should remove one of the sitting prelates.

in doing homage to the king, that, according to ancient custom, the archbishops and bishops should precede all the lay lords, and even the Duke of York."

BISHOP.

The Bishops of London, Durham, and Winchester have precedence of all the other bishops, the others ranking according to the seniority of their consecrations.

The Junior Bishop, not being of London, Durham, or Winchester, has not a seat in the House of Lords.

The mitre, placed over the arms of bishops, is a round cap, pointed and cleft at the top, from which hang two pendants fringed at the ends; it is surmounted by a fillet of gold set with precious stones.

The mitres of archbishops, and that also of the Bishop of Durham (as nominally Count Palatine of Durham), are represented as issuing out of a ducal coronet.

Archbishops and bishops impale their arms with those of the see, but they have neither crests, supporters, nor mottoes.

Bishops have the style of Lords, and Right Reverend Fathers in God.

BARONS.—Much obscurity prevails as to the ancient meaning, and even derivation, of the word baron; and eccentric speculations have been indulged in with respect to their ancient position. When the title was introduced into BARON.

England is uncertain. It seems probable that its original name in England was Navassour, which by the Danes was changed into Thane, and by the Normans into Baron. It never occurs as a title of dignity in the Saxon annals. By some it is supposed to have originally meant a hired soldier; by others, a free man; by others, a man equal to any other man; and so on. It is certain, however, that as a title of dignity it is of very ancient date in some parts of the Continent. Gregory Thuronensis writes of "the Barons of Burgundie, as well Bishops as other Leudes," and other old writers mention it in equally good company. But though the Normans introduced it into England, it was some time before it implied a man of distinguished mark. Earls had their barons under them, and charters are extant in which earls addressed them thus: "To all my barons, as well French as English, greeting." Even citizens of good note were called barons. To this day, the common law does not acknowledge a baron to be a title of dignity, unless it be connected with some special office. A Baron of the Exchequer is simply "Mr. Baron ———." The salient fact, however, is, that the barons of England soon rose to be the great moving power in the State, and how the title was accounted may be judged from a summons of Henry III. to the High Court of Parliament: "For he, after many troubles and enormous vexations betweene the King himselfe and Simon of Montfort, with other barons, and after appeased, did decree and ordaine that all those earls and barons of the realme of England, unto whom the King himselfe vouchsafed to direct his writs of summons, should come unto his Parliament, and none others." The date of this (the first precept) is 49 Henry III., 1264. The first baron created BY PATENT was John Beauchamp de Holt, created Baron Kidderminster by Richard II. The fact appears to be that the title or dignity of baron, at first vague and uncertain, like other designations and distinctions of disturbed times, was, like those, mellowed and moulded, with the growth of constitutional law and defined right, until it has taken its present intelligible position amongst English orders and degrees of honour. When a baron is called to the House of Peers by writ of summons, the writ is in the Queen's name. The ceremony of the admission of a baron, as well as other orders of the temporal peerage, into the House of Peers, is thus: He is brought into the House between two peers of his own rank, who conduct him up to the Lord Chancellor—his patent and writ of summons being carried by Garter King of Arms, who presents it to the Lord Chancellor, who directs the same to be read; which being done, the oaths are administered, and the peer takes his seat, from which he again rises and returns to the Chancellor, who congratulates him on becoming a member of the House of Peers, or on his elevation, as the case may be. The robes of a baron have but two guards of white fur, with as many rows of gold lace; in other respects they are the same with those of other peers. King Charles II. granted a coronet to the barons, who till his reign wore only a plain circle of gold. It is formed of six pearls, set at equal distances on a circle of gold bordered with ermine. A baron is styled Right Honourable, and by the Sovereign Right trusty and well beloved.

SCOTCH AND IRISH PEERS.

Scotch peers take precedence of British peers of the same rank created since the Union with Scotland; and Irish peers created before the Union with Ireland, in like manner, take place of British peers created since. Irish peers of later creation than the Union, rank, according to the dates of their patents, among the peers of Great Britain and Ireland. Peers holding Scotch or Irish titles do not sit of individual right in the House of Peers, but only as representatives of their fellow-peers. The Irish representative peers are elected by their fellow-peers for life; the Scotch are elected for each new Parliament, &c.

THE PRIVILEGES OF THE PEERS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

The privileges enjoyed by the peers of the kingdom were in former times very numerous, and in some instances of such a character as would be considered intolerable in these days. In other cases they have fallen into desuetude from the extinction of the matters and circumstances to which they relate. But some very important ones continue, the principal of which are as follow:—They are free from arrest for debt, as being the Queen's hereditary counsellors; therefore a peer cannot be outlawed in any civil action, and no attachment lies against his person. This privilege also extended to their domestics, as well as to those of the Lower House, till the year 1770, when their lordships most honourably joined the House of Commons in a bill for abolishing it. (Vide "Debrett's Debates in Parliament," 1770 to 1774, vol. v., p. 192.) Peers are also free from attending courts leet, or sheriffs' turns, or, in cases of riot, the posse comitatus. In criminal causes they are only tried by their peers, who give their verdict, not upon oath, as other jurors, but only upon their honour. A court is fitted up for the purposes of the trial in the middle of Westminster Hall, at the expense of the Crown.

To secure the honour of, and to prevent the spreading of any scandal upon, peers or any great officers of the realm, by reports, there is an express law called scandalum magnatum, by which any man convicted of making a scandalous report, though true, against a peer of the realm, is condemned to an arbitrary fine, and to remain in custody till the same be paid.

Upon any great trial in a court of justice, a peer may come into the court and sit there covered.

No peer can be covered in the royal presence without permission for that purpose, except Barons Kingsale and Forester. The privilege to these noblemen was granted, in the first instance, to John de Courcy, Earl of Ulster, by King John, as a mark of appreciation of the prowess he displayed in personal combat with a renowned French champion; the second instance is more recent, dating only temp. Henry VIII. In case of the poll tax, the peers bear the greater share of the burden, they being taxed every one according to his degree.

Each peer may qualify a certain number of chaplains, as follows:—An Archbishop, eight; a Duke, six; a Marquess, five; an Earl, five; a Viscount, four; a Bishop, six; a Baron, three. A Knight of the Garter may qualify three; a Duchess, Marchioness, Countess, or Baroness, being a widow, two.

KNIGHTS BANNERETS AND BARONETS.

Of late it has been customary with careless or superficial writers upon subjects of precedence and dignity to confound the meaning of these titles, though they have distinct origins, occupy different positions in order of precedence, and the first is more ancient than the second. As, however, the creation of a knight banneret, according to the formula and exact circumstances under which the dignity was formerly conferred, can no longer take place, we for convenience notice the two dignities under one general head, still preserving the requisite distinction.

BANNERETS were so called from the privilege of using a square banner, similar to that borne by barons, being granted them for signal services. This was the form, but the title was no doubt devised as a reward for distinguished military actions, and was usually accompanied by a pecuniary provision. "I have seen," says Camden, "a charter of King Edward III., by which he advanced John Coupland to the state of a banneret in the following words, because in a battle fought at Durham he had taken prisoner David the Second, King of Scots: 'Being willing to reward the said John, who took David de Bruis prisoner, and frankly delivered him unto us, for the deserts of his honest and valiant service, in such sort as others may take example by his precedent to do us faithful service in time to come, we have promoted the said John to the place and degree of a banneret; and, for the maintenance of the same state, we have granted, for us and our heires, to the same

John, five hundred pounds by the yeere, to be received for him and his heires,' &c. And when the Black Prince was engaged in the wars of Spain and Portugal, he delivered a banner to John Chandos, not previously knighted, with these words: 'Sir John, in the name of God, who blesse this day's service of yours, that it may speed well and turn to your glorie, beare yourself manfully, and give proof what a knight you are.' Having thus received the banner, Sir John rejoined his company with a cheerful heart, saying, 'My fellow-soldiers, there is my banner and yours, in case yee defend it courageously as your owne.'

The degree was in later times conferred with much form by the King, regent, or lieutenant-general, "who" (according to Camden), "after good words and wishes in parting, happie fortune, commandeth the tip or point of the said pennon to bee cut off, that of a long pennon it might be made a four square banner."

One writer of minute research says, in reference to this dignity, "I find that of old, banneret (or ban-rent) hath been with us a title higher than a baron; for barons may choose their own commissioners, but bishops, dukes, earls, lords, and ban-rents are to be summoned to Parliament by the King's special precept, and it is probable that these ban-rents were knights of extraordinary reputation, who were allowed to raise a company of men under their own banner. . . . But I conceive that those could not now sit in Parliament upon the King's precept, the former Act of Parliament being in desuetude. They have their precedency from baronets, though their wives have not, this being but a temporary dignity, and the other an heritable."

BARONETS, strictly so termed, owe the origin of their order to the policy of James I. of England. He instituted the order of English baronets to promote the "plantation" of the province of Ulster with loyal settlers. The baronetcy of Ireland followed that of England, and was founded for the same object.

BADGE OF ULSTER. BADGE OF NOVA SCOTIA.

The baronetcy of Scotland was founded with a view to the colonization and plantation of the province of Nova Scotia in North America. The privileges of the three orders were very nearly similar, and practically it may be said that all three are almost amalgamated. They are virtually so in all new creations. The original objects of these institutions have long since been amongst the things of the past, and, so far as the aid of the baronets was concerned, proved complete failures, though it was effectuated by other means. But the order of baronets, though created for an ephemeral object which its members did not accomplish, is now a dignified degree of hereditary distinction, at the head of the lesser nobility of the British empire; and the title is bestowed, and willingly accepted, as the reward of merit or eminence in any pursuit or position—political, diplomatic, military, mercantile, and of late years, to the credit of advancing intelligence, medical, literary, and so forth. As yet, however, only one or two instances of its bestowal for literary merit have occurred.

KNIGHTS.

It has been remarked by a discreet writer, that though those knights who are thus called without any further addition are ranged low upon the lists of precedence, the rank is not only the most ancient, but, looking back into history, the most illustrious; for in former ages all men distinguished by valour and military service became knights, and by all gentlemen aspiring to such distinction, admittance to the order of knighthood was a valued object.

It would be going far into the depths of antiquity to attempt to trace the origin of knighthood. We will only say here that it is essentially an institution of the days of chivalry. The latter word has itself an affinity with horsemanship, and our knights-bachelors are all equites aurati (golden-spurred horsemen). The Roman knight was eques "a horseman," and his rank was Eques, next below the Senatorial. In other countries, the ranks answering to our knights-bachelors indicate by their names their original occupation as military equestrians; hence the German reiter, the French chevalier, &c. The Germans, however, have another appellation, knecht, from which our own word knight is derived.

The martial kings of the Franks used to give arms, with many solemnities, to their sons and others, and to gird them with a sword; and our own King Alfred, when he made his nephew Athelstane a knight, "gave him a scarlet mantle set with precious stones, and a Saxon sword with a golden scabbard." Further on in the course of time, we find the ceremony of installation assuming a solemnly religious character, including previous confession and absolution, vigils in the church, &c. "And after the gospel," we are told by Ingulphus, who flourished shortly before the Norman invasion, "the priest was to put the sword, being previously blessed, upon the knight's neck, with his benediction; and thus, after he had heard mass again and received the sacrament, he became a lawful knight." For a long time ecclesiastics claimed the duty and privilege of dubbing knights. William Rufus was knighted by Archbishop Lanfranc; but this custom was put an end to, and afterwards kings were accustomed to send their sons to neighbouring courts to receive the honour of knighthood. Thus Henry II. sent to David King of Scots; Malcolm, King of Scots, to Henry II., and Edward I. to the King of Castile, to take of them "military or virile arms," a term used in those ages for the creation of a knight. The gilt spurs, the privilege of using a signet, &c., were amongst the conditions of knighthood. Not only the King, but the great earls, created knights, as we are told by Matthew Paris: "Here the Earle of Gloucester invested with a militarie girdle his brother William," and Gilbert de Clare was also knighted by Simon de Montfort. In fact, any knight could create a new one. But this was afterwards prohibited, and the privilege restricted to the Sovereign, or some high personage deputed by him.

The title of knight was desired and granted as an honourable addition or mark of distinction to the highest dignity, name, and rank; but this was only when it was received under honourable circumstances like those just described, for the possession of property at one time entitled to knighthood; and in the reign of Henry III., freeholders with a stated income were compelled to become knights under a fine. A proclamation was issued that whoever had £15 in land and above "should be dight in his armes," and endowed with knighthood, or be fined, "to the end that England as well as Italie might be strengthened with chivalry." But those knights in virtue of property, simply called milites, held a very different position from the milites gladio cincti, or knights whom the King had created by cineture of sword and belt. This class of knighthood was highly prized, and (as a contemporary writer observes, not without some exaggeration) "if any thing was promised on the faith and honour of a knight, it was always performed in the most scrupulous and punctilious manner, at whatever risk it was undertaken." This was the theory—the fact was rather different. Yet it is abundantly certain that the obligations of knighthood tended powerfully to elevate the mind and chasten the morals of those bound thereby. This was especially the case when the dignity was conferred by the king, aided by religious ceremonials. Thus, "The Bishop administered the following oath: 'Sir, you that desire to receive the order of knighthood, swear, before God, and this holy book, that you will not fight against the king, who now bestoweth the order of knighthood upon you; you shall also swear to maintain and defend all ladies, gentlewomen, widows, and orphans; and you shall shun no adventure of your person in any way where you shall happen to be.' The oath being taken, two lords led him to the King, who drew his sword, and laid it upon his head, saying, 'God and St. George make thee a good knight.' Seven ladies then girt on his sword, and four knights his spurs, and much other ceremony followed." Of late all this was dispensed with, and he on whom the title was conferred knelt down, when the King with his drawn sword slightly tapped him on the shoulder, saying to him in French, "Sois Chevalier au nom de Dieu;" that is, Be thou a knight in the name of God; afterwards adding, "Avances, Chevalier (Arise, Sir Knight)."

Some contend that knights-bachelors were not full knights, but a middle degree between knights and esquires. "There be," says Camden, "who would have bachelors so called, as one would say bas-chevaliers, that is, knights of low degree; although others derive their name from the French verb battailer, which means to combat or fight it out." On the other hand, respectable writers have contended that the term "bachelor" indicates the non-descent of the title, as if the knight were unmarried. Passing by these discussions, we may remark without disparagement that the simple knight-bachelor is scarcely regarded amongst ourselves as the equal of the member of a defined knightly order.

ESQUIRES.

Amid the superfluity of discussion respecting the origin and meaning of the title of esquire, the obvious and natural conclusion is that, as the derivation is from scutifer (shield-bearer), the esquires were those who bore the shields of princes, nobles, and knights, and being themselves of respectable quality, imparted some of that respectability (further reflected from the great persons whom they attended) to their office. They were frequently the personal friends and companions of their patrons. Thence the title became an object of ambition to gentlemen of the middle class; and Camden says that "the title of esquire, which in former times was a title of charge and office only, crept forth among other titles of dignity and worship." The same author enumerates five classes of esquires, of graduated degrees of honour. We know no such distinctions now-a-days, but it has been a subject of dispute amongst our most learned writers to whom the title of esquire really belongs. It seems pretty well understood, however, that those to whom it is of right due are all noblemen's younger sons, and the elder sons of such younger sons; the eldest sons of knights, and their eldest sons; the officers of the sovereign's court and household; naval and military officers from the rank of captain upwards; barristers at-law, royal academicians, graduates of universities, medical men holding degrees, justices of the peace, &c. It is contended, however, that justices of the peace are only esquires in reputation; besides, a justice of the peace holds this title no longer than he is in the commission of the peace, in case he be not otherwise qualified to bear it; but a sheriff of a county, who is a superior officer, retains the title of esquire during his life, in consequence of the trust once reposed in him. The heads of some ancient families are said to be esquires by prescription; even this is a disputed question.

GENTLEMEN.

If antiquarian controversy wax warm as to the classes entitled to the style of esquire, the qualification for the name of gentleman has engrossed still more elaborate discussion. The question is not who is above it, but who is below it; for the highest in the land is proud of being a true gentleman; and it was regarded as the highest compliment ever paid to King George IV., when as Prince Regent he was called "the first gentleman in Europe." But if the true gentleman stand at so exalted an elevation, the assumption of the word has become so common as to have marred its meaning. One not improbable derivation of the word gentleman is, that towards the decline of the Roman empire there were two companies of particularly distinguished soldiers, mostly of good families: one of these was called Gentiles, the other Scutarii; and it has been suggested that the titles gentleman and esquire may have been derived from this. Again, it is surmised that gentleman means descent from gentle lineage, to which Selden adds, that it is necessary he should follow the example of that lineage. Attorneys-at-law, and persons in sundry other positions, are personally entitled to the addendum of "gentleman" to their names—an honour however, which, a satirical author observes, "few care to stickle for, or to see 'gent.' written at the end of their names." In good truth, the words "esquire" and "gentleman" have become so hackneyed, that though in their intrinsic acceptation, they are highly honourable, and the title of "gentleman" is one which the most exalted in rank aspire to deserve, their ordinary use conveys no significancy. An "esquire" or "gentleman," as popularly written, is literally a nominis umbra—the shadow of a name. Yet the following direct definition of the relations of gentlemen as between each other is not without interest:—"The chief of the family takes place of any gentleman of the family, and though generally it be believed that gentlemen have no precedency one from another, yet reason and discretion allow that a gentleman of three generations should cede to a gentleman of ten, if there be not a very great disparity between their fortunes, and for the same reason that a gentleman of three generations claims precedency from any ordinary landed man who has newly acquired his lands."

PRIVILEGES OF THE GENTRY.

In bygone times, the lower nobility and gentry possessed privileges, as against their inferiors, which would now be regarded as monstrous, and have of course fallen into disuse. A few examples will suffice:—

"In equal crimes, a gentleman shall be punishable with more favour than the churl." "In giving evidence, the testimony of a gentleman is more authentic than a clown's." "In the election of magistrates and officers by vote, the suffrage of a gentleman should take place of an ignoble person."

Many other instances may be cited, but being ineffective, they have disappeared before the progress of civil freedom, under which, substantially, "every man is equal before the law."

CITIZENS AND BURGESSES.

Camden tells us that these "are such as in their own city perform any public function, or fill any particular office, or by election have a room in our High Court of Parliament." But this description must now be considerably enlarged, and practically the name is applied to all freemen and electors. Citizens and burgesses enjoy valuable privileges and immunities, guaranteed to them under constitutional safeguards, and rules of precedency which, being mostly of a local character, need not be particularised in this work.

Brothers living,—Augustus William, b. 1841, m. 1871.—Charles Herbert Stuart, b. 1853.

Creation,—1295,—Baron Erskine 1425, and Aloa, about 1489,—Earl of Mar 1565,—Baron Dirleton 1603,—Baron Erskine of Dirleton 1604,—Viscount Fentoun 1606,—Earl of Kellie 1619, all in the peerage of Scotland. A Baronet, 1666.

* The Titles of Earl of Mar and Baron Garioch, are still assumed by John Francis Erskine Goodeve-Erskine, of South Barrow, Bromley, Kent, who was son of the late William James Goodeve, Esq., of Clifton, by Lady Frances Jemima Erskine, sister of the 32nd Earl.

In 1866 upon the death of his uncle, John Francis Miller Erskine, 9th Earl of Mar and 11th Earl of Kellie, Mr. Goodeve-Erskine assumed the title of Earl of Mar, and his right to such rank was admitted by the authorities of Scotland. The title was, however, claimed by the 12th Earl of Kellie, and after his death by the 13th Earl, to whom in Feb. 1875, the Committee for Privileges of the House of Lords adjudged the Earldom. In explanation of Mr. Goodeve-Erskine's continued assumption of the title, the Editor of "Debrett" under the peculiar circumstances of the case, thinks it desirable to print the following protest, that has been published by that gentleman:—

"The Heir of line of the ancient Earldom of Mar has been advised and humbly submits, with deference to the authority which the Committee for Privileges seeks to assume, that for the following reasons the Committee has no power to extinguish the old Earldom.

Arms.—Quarterly: 1st and 4th, azure, a bend between six cross crosslets, fitchée or, ar: 2nd and 3rd, argent, a pale sable, Erskine; over all, on an escutcheon gules, the imperal crown of Scotland proper, within a double tressure flory counterflory or, Kellie. Crest.—1st, a dexter hand, holding a skene in pale argent, hilted and pomelled or, over crest, "Je pense plus," Mar; 2nd, a demi-lion rampant guardant gules, armed argent, over crest, "Decori decus additavito," Kellie. Supporters.—Two griffins gules, armed, beaked, and winged or.

Seats.—Alloa Park, Clackmannanshire; Kellie Castle, Fife.

Clubs.—Carlton,—Junior Carlton,—New (Edinburgh).

MAR AND KELLIE, Earl of.—His lordship's predecessor was his father, Walter Coningsby. C.B., 10th Earl of Mar, and 12th Earl of Kellie, eldest surviving son of the Hon. Henry David Erskine, and grandson of the 7th Earl of Mar, of the Erskine race. He was b. July 12, 1810, and succeeded his cousin as nearest heir male of the surname of Erskine 1866. Educated at Durham School and at Edinburgh University. Entered the Bengal Army 1828, and retired as Lieut.-Col. 1861. Held several civil and military appointments in India, and received the thanks of both Houses of Parliament, and was created a C.B. for his conduct in the Indian Mutiny. Was a Representative Peer of Scotland, and Vice-Lieut. of Clackmannanshire: m. 1834, Elise, daughter of Col. Youngson, of Bowscar, Cumberland, and d. Jan. 15, 1872, leaving issue three sons.

MAR AND KELLIE, ELISE, Countess of,—daughter of Col. Youngson, of Bowscar, Cumberland: m. 1834, the 10th Earl of Mar, and 12th Earl of Kellie, who d. 1872.

Residence.—55, Ennismore Gardens, Princes Gate.

March, Earl of, M.P. son of the Duke of Richmond. (see Richmond.)

„ Earl of, title borne by the Earl of Wemyss.

In Peerage questions the Committee (acting for the House of Lords) is called on by the 'Crown' merely to enquire into and report only on the subject set forth by one or more Petitioners in their petitions which are first lodged before the House for presentation to the Queen and then referred by Her Majesty to the Committee to report thereon.

Lord Kellie, as the claimant, petitioned to be declared entitled to a modern Earldom called Mar, dating only from 1565 by a presumed new 'creation' of that year.

His opponent, whose petition was drawn up as that of 'John Francis Erskine Goodeve-Erskine, Earl of Mar and Baron Garioch,' and received by the House of Lords in that form, did not appear at all as a claimant of the old Earldom of Mar, nor of any other title, as his counsel insisted and to which the Attorney General advising on behalf of the 'Crown' alluded, but merely as objecting to a new title called Mar being bestowed on Lord Kellie as heir male of the Erskine family, whose connection with the only Earldom of Mar on record was merely by the marriage of Sir Thomas Erskine (in the 15th century) with the heiress of Mar.

Hence the old Earldom of Mar was not claimed by either party, and any observations made by their Lordships regarding it (and regarding the old title of Garioch), however incidental to the arguments they may have been, are beside the question, they do not constitute a formal Judgment, and are consequently not binding on the heir of line and his heirs.

Again, by a resolution of the House of Lords (July 25, 1862), as already pointed out, a Scotch peer is not legally required to be formally recognized by the House of Lords; and thus, in 1866, on the death of the last Lord Mar, his nephew as heir of line contented himself with obtaining the usual formal recognition by the Scottish authorities, no more nor less than is customary with Scotch peers.

Under these circumstances the heir of line to the ancient Earldom of Mar does not feel called on to seek the formal recognition of the House of Lords, being de jure sanguinis the natural and rightful inheritor of the old Earldom enjoyed by his uncle, the last Lord Mar.

This old Earldom of Mar still stands in its time-honoured place on the 'Union Roll' of Scotch peers, and is independent of, and untouched by, Lord Kellie's new title called Mar, which is unrecorded in the annals of Scottish history and genealogy."

"KRINE COSMETIC," THE HAIR BEAUTIFIER,

Promotes the Growth of the Hair and imparts to it a Healthy Brilliancy.

IT CLEANSES THE HEAD AND

RESTORES GREY HAIR TO ITS ORIGINAL COLOUR.

IT IS A PREVENTIVE OF COLD IN THE HEAD, AND AFFORDS A GRATEFUL RELIEF TO HEADACHE.

This Hair Wash will not soil the most delicate lace or cambric. It is entirely free from lead and all other mineral and noxious ingredients, as may be proved by chemical analysis.

The above fact renders the "KRINE COSMETIC" an invaluable preparation for the nursery, as well as for the adult, superseding the use of pomade or any other emollient.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I wish your Hair Wash could be made generally known, for it has a most wonderful effect on me. I do not suffer half so much from headache since I have used it. After using it for two months my hair is much thicker; and as for my mother, she had a very bald parting, but after applying your wash for the same time it has become well covered, and strange to say, her hair is not so white as it was. It is the most agreeable lotion I ever used."

"St. Krine's Square, May 13th, 1873."

"The 'Krine' did more than it professed to do. It entirely stopped my hair from falling off, and it has never fallen off since, though I ceased to use it for a reason that would have recommended it to a younger person—it entirely restored my hair to its natural colour, which did not quite suit my seventy-seven years. My hair is at present quite strong."

"Beachfield House, Penzance, October 10th, 1873."

"I am glad to be able to testify to the good that your Hair Wash, the 'Krine Cosmetic,' does. I find that since I have used it I do not suffer from such violent headaches, and that I can keep the head just as clean by using the 'Krine' twice a week as by washing it every morning with water. It is also a great relief to me when suffering from colds in the head. And I can assure you that it has greatly increased the growth of my beard and moustache. I particularly recommend it to people who suffer from headaches."

"Rue Traktir, Paris, December 14th, 1873."

"I have just been solicited for more 'Krine Cosmetic' for the children, and having used it myself with such agreeable effects can understand nurses' dissatisfaction with any other emollient preparation. It cleanses, softens, strengthens, and improves the appearance of the hair better than anything we have ever known, and it is as valuable at this season for its quickly drying and stimulating sensation, preventing colds, as it is in summer for its refreshingly cooling action."

"Theberton, 20th December, 1873."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE.
 THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

ADVICE TO INVALIDS.—If you wish to obtain quiet, refreshing sleep, free from headache, relief from pain and anguish, to calm and assuage the weary achings of protracted disease, invigorate the nervous media, and regulate the circulating systems of the body, you will provide yourself with that marvellous remedy discovered by Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE (Member of the College of Physicians, London), to which he gave the name of

CHLORODYNE,

And which is admitted by the profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.

CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.

CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.

CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, &c.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNGHAM, Mount Charles, Donegal, Dec. 11th, 1868

"Lord Francis Conyngham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address."

* * Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, Dec. 31st, 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. None is genuine without the words "DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1876—

A Statistical and Historical Annual of the States of the Civilized World. A Handbook for Politicians or Merchants. By FREDERICK MARTIN. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

The Times :—"The Almanach de Gotha, in spite of its long reign as a favourite, shrinks into insignificance by the side of the handsome and useful volume which Mr. F. Martin has given us as a manual for our library table—a book which not only serves, so to speak, as 'the Peerage of Continental Royalty,' but gives us large stores of authentic information, corrected to the very latest date, respecting matters of such world-wide interest as the revenue and expenditure, the density of the population, the birth and death-rate, the premiers and heads of Government in the several civilized States of the four quarters of the world."

The Standard :—"Everybody who knows this work is aware that it is a book that is indispensable to writers, financiers, politicians, statesmen, and all who are directly or indirectly interested in the political, social, industrial, commercial, and financial condition of their fellow creatures at home and abroad. All the information that could possibly be desired by politicians, merchants, and public speakers and writers relative to the Constitution and Government, the Church and education, the revenue and expenditure, the army and navy, the area and population, the commerce, industry, and trade of every civilized country in the world, is to be found readily accessible within the small limits of this admirable year book."

NEW EDITION.

Revised and brought down to the Peace of Versailles, Feb. 28, 1871. 8vo. half bound, price 16s.

ANNALS OF OUR TIME—A Diurnal of Events, Social and Political, Home and Foreign, from the Accession of Queen Victoria. By JOSEPH IRVING.

SUPPLEMENT from Feb., 1871, to March, 1874. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

The Times says:—"We have before us a trusty and ready guide to the events of the past thirty years, available equally for the statesman, the politician, the public writer, and the general reader. . . . If Mr. Irving's object has been to bring before the reader all the most noteworthy occurrences since the beginning of her Majesty's reign, he may justly claim the credit of having done so most briefly, succinctly, and simply, and in such a manner, too, as to furnish him with the details necessary in each case to comprehend the event of which he is in search in an intelligent manner."

The Daily News says:—"It appears to us to be admirably executed, full, yet condensed, clearly arranged, and provided with an ample index. Such a work will be a treasure to all journalists and politicians."
